

CHINA

THE STRUGGLE AGAINST JAPAN

Background

Japanese expansion into China in the early '30s was designed not only to control China's resources, but also to eliminate British, American, and Soviet influence. Japan wanted to isolate China from all external aid.

China's objective is to resist Japanese expansion into China and establish support from other powers in the struggle against Japan.

Political Situation

China begins the game at war with Japan and 12 IPCs. China can't declare war on a European Axis power unless one of those powers first either declares war on China or moves units into a territory into which Chinese units are allowed to move. A state of war between China and one Axis power won't affect its relations with the other Axis powers.

China may not do Research & Development.